
Venue enhances pleasure

By Sally Howe

The Hall Pavilion at Santa Clara's Triton museum isn't very big, but it's perfect for a intimate play.

I saw a four person cast stage Proof last week and it couldn't have worked out better.

Proof is a tightly written show and although it's billed as a drama, you aren't really sure in watching where it is going.

The four actors were excellent—every one of them carried off their roles to my satisfaction and seemed genuinely pleased when the audience greeted them outside the theater after the final curtain call.

This show was one of several staged each year by Santa Clara Players.

Every single one I have seen was worth my time. Hats off to director Ana-Catrina Buchser and players Jeff Swan, Lori Goulart, Stephen Sherwood and Kelly Battcher.

Show plays through this weekend (August 17). Info at www.scplayers.org.
